i, I. The ninth letter of the Roman alphabet. It functions as an open short or close long vowel, or a palatal semivowel; in some unaccented short syllables the spelling of words varied between i and u, with a sound value lying in between the two (ü); cf. optimus optumus, libido lubido, etc. b as a numeral, originally a simple stroke and not the letter, it represents a unit.
